U. S. WILL STAND PAT ON ADRIATIC PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The United States will continue to support the rights of the Jugo-Slavs in its dispute over Fiume it was announced today at the White House. This government will not withdraw from the Adriatic controversy it was hinted.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The final drafting of the Allied reply to President Wilson's note probably will be completed at today's session of the Council of Premiers it was learned semi-officially today. No intimation as to the contents of the reply will be made until it has been received by the President, it was said. There is little likelihood that the American representatives will be called into session, it was said.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The Allied reply to President Wilson's Adriatic note will be dispatched to Washington this afternoon it was learned today. The note was approved at this morning's session of the Council of Premiers.

PRESIDENT "JUST AS USUAL AND CONTINUES TO IMPROVE"—GRAYSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—President Wilson is "just, as usual today and continues to improve," Dr. Cary T. Grayson, his personal physician declared today in denying the reports that the President is suffering a relapse and that Dr. F. X. Dercum, Philadelphia nerve specialist, had been summoned to the White House shortly after midnight. "The President was up early today," said Dr. Grayson.

HITCHCOCK DEFY TO REPUBLICANS HASTENS CLIMAX ON TREATY FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Senator Hitchcock, Democratic leader, has notified Senator Lodge that consideration of present efforts of ratifying the treaty are hopeless unless the Republicans will accept some of the Democratic proposals for compromise on Article Ten or offer some compromise of their own which the Democrats will accept, it was learned today. Hitchcock took this means of bringing about a speedy climax as forecasted yesterday by the United Press.

PITTSBURGH LEADER LOSES BY FIRE

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 17.—Fire today threatened to destroy the offices of the Pittsburgh Leader and adjoining buildings on Fifth Avenue near Smithfield street. The total loss is estimated at more than $10,000. Guests at the Hotel Henry rushed into the streets when their rooms were filled with smoke. The blaze was discovered on the first floor of the building. Its cause is unknown. The Hotel Henry and Avenue Theatre were slightly damaged.

BENSON TO HEAD SHIPPING BOARD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Rear Admiral W. S. Benson, retired, will be the new chairman of the United States Shipping Board it was announced today at the White House.

FORMER WELL KNOWN RESIDENT DIES IN COLORADO

Deputy Sheriff Frank S. Gilliland received a telegram at noon from his brother John L. Gilliland announcing the death of his wife, which occurred at their home in La Junta, Colorado, this morning.

Mrs. Gilliland was a daughter of the late Geoffrey Fisher, of Karlsruhe township and a sister of Henry E. Fisher, of Nichols street, and resided in Clearfield for a number of years. Some ten or twelve years ago on account of Mrs. Gilliland's failing health the family located in La Junta, where Mr. Gilliland has been successfully engaged in business ever since.

The deceased was an earnest Christian woman and a devoted member of the Lutheran church. She was ever the tender loving wife and mother and possessed an exceptionally wide circle of admiring friends in this section, who sympathize deeply with her family in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. Gilliland was about 48 years of age and is survived by her husband, two sons and three daughters. She is also survived by one brother and seven sisters, viz: Henry E. Fisher, of Clearfield; Mrs. William Henderson, of Alliance, Ohio; Mrs. Anna Burley of Tyrone; Miss Hannah, of Tyrone; Mrs. Robert Waring, of Jersey City, N. J.; Mrs. Wrenham Fleming, of Tyrone; Mrs. B. S. Dine, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Edward Manning, of La Junta, Colorado.

STATE COLLEGE IS TO BE MECCA FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Feb. 17.—The program of the Pennsylvania State College for the coming summer will contain something of interest to all persons who are in any way connected with the public schools of the state. The scope of the summer session has been enlarged so as to include, in addition to the regular six-weeks courses for teachers, a school for training continuation school teachers, a school for county and assistant county superintendents, and a school for supervisors and directors of home economics and agriculture in the vocational schools. There will be special courses for librarians and a series of camps for those who are interested in the work of the Boy Scouts. Steps have also been taken to provide instruction for the school directors of the state.

Practically the entire facilities of the college will be in use during the summer months while the regular student body is enjoying the vacation period. To provide for the varied forms of activities it will be necessary to supplement the faculty by bringing in experts from other fields and institutions. Among those who have already been secured are Dr. Edward C. Snyder, Commissioner of Vocational Education for the state of California; Dr. P. M. Harbold, formerly head of the Millersville State Normal school; Miss Jane E. McKenzie, of the McKelvey school, Pittsburgh; Miss Margery Lyon, of the Minneapolis Vocational school for girls; William T. Ellis, the well known traveler and writer, and Dr. Edward Howard Griggs of New York. Because of the variety of work offered and the excellent location of State College for summer study, the Centre county institution, during July and August, will become the Mecca of a large number of people working in and for the schools of the state.

BOYS AND GIRLS OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO MEET HERE

On February 26th, boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 22 will gather in Clearfield from all over the county, to discuss methods and form plans for improving conditions in their communities. The conference will be made up of representatives of the Sunday Schools of the county. Each Sunday School may send five delegates, two of whom will be girls, two boys and one an adult.

The purpose of the conference is stated to be the presentation of proved plans and methods of work for young people in the Sunday schools; to make use of the latent energy of the boys and girls, and to train them for leadership.

The leaders of the conference are: R. A. Waite, of Chicago, Superintendent of Boys' Work of the International Sunday School Association, and P. G. Orwig, of Philadelphia, State Young People's Superintendent.

Every Sunday School in the county is urged to name its delegates soon. Only properly registered delegates will be admitted to the meetings. The conference will meet in the First Baptist church, Clearfield. The first session opens at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

STOCKS OPEN WEAK

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The stock market opened weak today. There was continued liquidation in General Motors when that stock on first sale broke 3% and 33 to 225% and 226. Crucible was again the target of the bears and sold for 197 and 195 off 3 1/2 and 5 1/2. Republic Steel was off 3/4 at 100 1/2. Bethlehem B at 85 1/2 off 3/4. United States Steel at 97 1/2 up 1/4. Northern Pacific at 71 1/2 off 1/4.

ATTACK ON MAN MAY RESULT IN HIS DEATH

Elwood Z. Mark Is Victim of Assault At Corner of Ninth And Dorey Streets Today

ATTACKED WITHOUT WARNING

Elwood Z. Mark was the victim of an assault this afternoon at the corner of 9th and Dorey street that may result in his death.

While turning the corner he was attacked without a sign of warning by M. W. Barker, who, as far as it could be learned this afternoon, had never before had a word with Mark, and did not even know his name. Although Mark was placed in a condition that may result fatally for him in the near future, he was able to leave the spot without assistance and hurried on his way, as though he had been the one guilty of the assault, instead of the guilty one being Barker, as the facts afterwards proved.

Although the assault was witnessed by many persons there was no effort on the part of anyone to stop Barker after he left Mark, and the police so far have taken no action in the matter. This is generally ascribed, however, to the fact that the concealed weapon used by Barker, was not seen by anyone who witnessed the assault, and, therefore, the police feel that they have no evidence, and that a prosecution could not result favorably without the testimony of Mark, who it was said is willing to let the matter drop in view of the fact if he recovers from the attack he will call it quits.

Conditions Won't Remain

That this condition will not always be the result of these attacks, is said to be fast approaching, for it is declared by the authorities who know, that in the not too distant future, the people will see to it that such assaults are punished just as are those who attack with knives or gun, or other visible weapons. The weapon used by Barker today was a mass of pneumonia, influenza, scarlet fever, diphtheria and other germs, which were in his spit in his mouth and throat. But because Barker is a particularly robust man, or because he happens to have been so frequently in contact with these germs that he has created an immunity (a defense) against them, he was not ill at the time of the assault. The weapon, however, may prove to be as deadly to Mark as though it had been a revolver pressed into his stomach and fired by Barker.

Mark will harbor the results of this assault today, and within five or six days, he may prove unable to resist them, and then he will be succumbed by them. If circumstances are right he will get well after having been put to the loss of time, loss of employment, loss of money and given the trouble and suffering of going through serious sickness because Barker was too thoughtless and even criminally indifferent to the rights and security of others, to have covered his mouth with a handkerchief when he coughed these germs into the face of Mark.

Asked today if the facts of this incident warranted civil or criminal action, several of the local physicians vehemently declared that nothing ever truer had been written, and that it will not be long before the law will allow any person so attacked and assaulted by another, to bring criminal proceedings just as surely and quickly and resultfully as though the attack had been made with a revolver, a knife or other deadly weapon.

One physician said: "There is little difference in shooting at a person or coughing directly into his or her face. The marksman-ship might be bad and the person not be hit, and the cougher MIGHT not have deadly disease germs in his or her throat, but the chances are more likely that the shooter would miss, than that the throat or mouth of any cougher is free from dangerous carry-on germs. Coughed out spray takes its place beside machine gun bullets for deadliness."

The names in the above story are fictitious—but the facts are true.

GRAMPIAN FAIR ASSOCIATION IS IN FINE SHAPE

At a meeting of the Grampian Fair Association held in Grampian Thursday evening, February 12, the following officers were elected:

President, Hon. D. D. Miller; vice president, B. P. Williams; treasurer, Dora Helper; secretary, T. L. Wall; assistant secretary, T. E. Moore; members of the executive committee to serve 2 years, W. T. Thorpe and J. P. Rowles. M. R. Woodel and J. W. Scheurman are the hold over members of the committee.

The auditors report showed that the finances of the association are in a flourishing condition, with a substantial balance in the treasury, part of which will be used to make a further payment on the Merry-go-round purchased last fall.

Much enthusiasm was displayed for a great Fair this year, and plans for it were discussed, and a meeting of the executive committee was called for the next meeting.

At this meeting of the executive committee the dates for the fair were fixed on September 22, 23 and 24, 1920.

Plans were made for getting out the annual premium list very soon and the leaflets containing the school and garden work for the children will be supplied to the schools in a week, so that preparation may begin at once. All schools and children in the county are invited to participate in the fair, and interested teachers and directors, especially in country districts, are requested to write to the secretary of the Juvenile Fair at Grampian for information and leaflets.

The Association was incorporated just before the Fair was held last fall.

Every effort will be made to provide excellent entertainment and harmless amusements as well as instruction at the fair, for both old and young.

COURT RESTRAINS SACRIFICE OF GERMAN SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The supreme court of the District of Columbia today called a halt on the shipping board's proposed sale of the thirty ships taken from Germany. When Mr. Hearst's application to have the shipping board enjoined from making the sale was argued in the district supreme court Justice Bailey announced that he would grant the application immediately unless the board would agree to delay the sale pending hearing on his decision Friday. The shipping board consented to suspend the sale. The senate, after a highly interesting debate, adopted the McKellar resolution requiring the sale of the ships postponed until authorized by Congress.

The McKellar resolution also instructs the shipping board to make a full report to congress of the circumstances of its proposal to auction off the ships and to "accept the $28,000,000 bid."

Despite the proceedings in court and in the senate in opposition to its proposal to sell the ships, the shipping board today went ahead with its so-called auction to the extent of receiving bids.

ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICES

Tomorrow being Ash Wednesday, services in St. Andrews church will be as follows:

Penitential Office and Holy Communion, 10 a. m.
Evening Prayer and Sermon at 7:30 p. m.

There will also be a service on Friday evening at 7:30, at which time the Rector will begin a series of Lectures on the Apostles Creed. The subject Friday evening will be "History of the Creed."

The full Lenten program will be announced the first of the week.

P. A. Harris and wife have returned to their home on River street from a visit to West Decatur where they were called on account of the sudden serious illness of W. H. Menz, who suffered an attack of nose bleed, but is now recovering nicely.

Caillaux Put on Trial Charged With Treason

PARIS, Feb. 17. (United Press).—The trial of Joseph Caillaux, former premier of France, charged with high treason—or paraphrased through courtesy as "plotting against the external safety of the state"—was to be called today before the High Court of the French senate. The penalty on conviction is usually death.

The trial probably will be the last of importance in the long series of court proceedings connected with the complicated drama of treason and intrigue by which the French government charged such men as Bola Pasha, Louis J. Malvy, Pierre Lenoire and Caillaux attempted to carry on a defeatist campaign when Germany was uttering hardest at the gates of Verdun. They wanted Germany to come so near to winning the war that Caillaux, as leader of the enemies of the administration at Paris, might be called to preserve the public, thus embarrassing Premier Clemenceau.

Trial of Caillaux was decided upon on September 16 last by the French senate committee investigating the defeatist movement. The basis of the charges against the former premier, as summed up in the formal report of the senatorial committee—corresponding to an indictment in American court procedure—follows:

"Political notes discovered in a Florence safe throw a flood of light on M. Caillaux's real intentions. They prove he had conceived a plan to seize power when, on making the public believe the Germans were going to take Verdun and win the war, his followers would put him forward as France's savior."

He had every means to execute this plan. These cannot form the basis of a charge but justice has the right to ask if it is duty to take measures against them."

The indictment then pictures Caillaux from the time he left the senate as a paymaster, in which he had collected a few months' pension, and follows him through all his plotting. It shows him with an insatiable avarice and desire for power, directed to the ends of his selfish and ambitious aims.

He said he went to Berlin to obtain an obscure mission for the government and while there met Count Bernburg, German ambassador, and gave him his views on the war for transmission to the German government. Then came his operations with Baron von Mannheim, who, it was alleged, furnished cash toward the defeatist campaign being waged in France. Rouge, under direction of Louis J. Malvy. There were other instances of a collusion with Bernburg.

It was Clemenceau who called the master plotter. He charged Caillaux with a speech in the senate against the minister of finance, who was named by Caillaux. One other instance of alleged traitors fell upon the former less exposes by the investigation, until on January 12, 1919, when he had piled up volumes of evidence against himself during his testimony in the trials of Malvy, Rouge, Bernburg and others, he was arrested and jailed in the Prison de Santé, charged with treason.

monwealth's witnesses, the jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged. The case of Com. vs. John Henry and Mary McLaughlin, in which the defendants were charged with assault and battery by Martin McLaughlin, a tire salesman, was called on for trial today. The jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged.

The parties in this case are John DuBois. On a Sunday morning, November Mrs. McLaughlin and her husband went to the public highway just outside of DuBois over the Maglioli family car which was passing in the neighborhood. Mrs. McLaughlin said a few stones at the car and as was to be expected Bill Maglioli got mad and about that time all men of Maglioli appeared on the scene, as Maglioli describes it, "they hit a 'red cat'." Between the two cars a "raw convenient" machine, Maglioli was at down for the road with about a hundred yards about his head and arms.

He remarks: "On the highway and where he fell and injured by members of his own family and the suit followed.

The jury decided that Maglioli was mistaken about old man McLaughlin and acquitted the defendant. They also were of the opinion that Maglioli took his life in his own hands when he remained within a hundred yards of where a woman was throwing stones at a car and while they acquitted the charge of assault and battery, they found that she pay half the costs for having the stones and with the prosecutor pay the other half for getting hit.

This was case No. 5, which was the week and ended the trial for this week.

The Grampian ass. charges murder case will be tried next week.

Now it is proposed to interne the Kaiser on some island thousands of miles from the scene of his former home. Let our hunter's association call attention to the beauties of Birch Island on the Susquehanna. We venture to predict that there would be a great deal of duck hunting in that vicinity.

A Burlington, N. J., pastor wants all religious people of New Jersey to pray for their war governor. Perhaps a reading of Civil War history and its lessons would be more to the point. We wonder if the governor of New Jersey does not have an exaggerated opinion of his little realm. His state strikes us as just a pimple on the outermost part of Uncle Sam's nose.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS CONFERENCE

Calling a conference of boy and girl workers in the Sunday Schools of Clearfield County is a step which should do much to fill the gap in Sunday school interest which exists in almost every school with boys and girls of the teen age.

It is an exceedingly hard matter to hold the interest of a boy when he passes the age of sixteen and the lack of sufficient Sunday school adult workers is probably best accounted for by the defection of youngsters just at the age when they are most receptive to training if their interest can be held. Failure of the school to hold the boy and girl is not the fault of the school, the lesson leaflets or the teachers. We have noticed that when the parents are there, the children are there; not by compulsion, but rather by the example set by parents. It is not an uncommon thing for a boy to tell a teacher that he is in Sunday School because he was compelled to come and in nine of ten of such instances the parent will not be present. Where a boy likes to attend Sunday School it is usually found that the parents are there also.

The conference of boys and girls here is of greater importance than the regular Sunday school convention and it is to be hoped that every Sunday school in the district will sense the real importance of it and have delegates on hand. It is also of paramount importance that the Clearfield Sunday schools make an extra effort to open their homes and their hearts to the delegates.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE

Clearfield's housing problems have been the subject of discussion in these columns many times during the past year and the problems have been growing more acute with every passing day. It is indeed surprising that a community of the progressiveness and wealth of Clearfield should allow conditions to get to such a point as they now are. We have seen dozens of good, substantial families come here with steady employment who were forced to seek boarding and rooms for months at a time. We have seen others who saw opportunities here but could not find homes. Literally hundreds of young men have married and are living with their parents because they are unable to get only a few rooms to feather as the nest.

Clearfield has gained the reputation of being a town which does not want any more people because those who are in a position to make room for more people have not done so. Clearfield is now getting to be known as a town that does not take care of the people she has. A "For Rent" sign is now as hard to find as a "beer sign." We grant that this is a healthy condition—for the landlord—but for the man who must rent it means heavy financial loss. Worse than that, for the general business of the community it means stagnation.

There are enough families without homes in Clearfield today to fill twenty-five new houses at once. These twenty-five new homes would add no small benefit to the community.

As we stand today, Clearfield can do no better than stand still. Can we afford to stand still?

The MAN NOBODY KNEW OF HOLWORTHY HALL.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—In a base hospital at Neuilly, France, his face disfigured beyond recognition, an American soldier serving in the French army attracts attention by his deep despondency. Asked by the surgeons for a photograph to guide them in making over his face, he offers in derision a picture of the Saviour, bidding them take that as a model. They do so, making a remarkable likeness.

CHAPTER II.—Invalided home, on the boat he meets Martin Harmon, New York broker, who is attracted by his remarkable features. The ex-soldier gives his name as "Henry Hilliard," and his home as Syracuse, New York. He left there under a cloud, and is embittered against his former fellow townsmen. Harmon makes him a proposition to sell mining stocks in Syracuse, concealing his identity. He accepts it, seeing in it a chance to make good and prove he has been underestimated.

"Well, there he was—wounded, and marooned in France, and with a bad conscience. Perhaps you can understand why he got my sympathy."

"Poor Dick!" said Angela, barely above a whisper, and Hilliard, looking across at her, was stirred by vague intuitions which rendered him guiltily uncomfortable. It had simply never occurred to him in announcing the death of a man who had run away from Syracuse in disgrace, he might find pity and forgiveness waiting for expression. Was there still an opportunity for him to change his tactics, to admit that it was only the unregenerate soul and the outward countenance of Dicky Morgan that had perished, and to maintain that a new being, a penitent and resolute being, had arisen phoenixlike to make atonement for the wasted years that had been ended by shrapnel fire from the Huns? And suppose he did so, what would they say? If public opinion were to model itself upon the sorrow of poor little Angela Cullen, was it not better to confess at once, to wipe the slate clean, and to begin afresh? Had he said so much that the pathway to truth was closed—or was a lie well stuck to better than the truth, half told?

Morals, which are nothing but negative virtues anyway, hang on trifles. Hilliard was tottering on the uttermost edge of decision—and Mr. Cullen, flung the weight of an aimless chatter against him, and settled the matter out of hand.

"He certainly had plenty to be sorry for," said Mr. Cullen.

"Oh, dad!" said Angela, with a quick intake of her breath.

Virtuous, was Mr. Cullen. A church-goer and a communicant, was Mr. Cullen. A giver of alms, and a friend to his friends—but in forgetting that the evil that men do should not be rightfully allowed to live on after them, and in remembering, perhaps too clearly at that moment, the final interview he had held with Dicky Morgan, Mr. Cullen throttled repentance into a state of furious helplessness, and brought back Hilliard to his senses.

"Yes," said Hilliard, "he had plenty to be sorry for, and he was. Of his troubles here, I'm not capable of sitting as judge. Instead, I sat as confessor. So that you'll be more interested in that part of his life which you evidently haven't known about, and I have. He left here, I think, in December. He hadn't any fixed purpose; all he wanted was to find a place where he could begin over again on a fresh basis, and make a man of himself. . . . For that much, at least, you can give him credit."

"And I do," said Cullen, approvingly.

Hilliard, swept again by the nearness of deliverance from his doubts, leaned forward. A strong endorsement of Morgan's ambition at this juncture might yet have brought about a re-education.

"I'm glad you do, Mr. Cullen. . . . I think myself it was the only course he could have taken." He hung perilously upon the response; it would either justify or condemn his present attitude.

"That's probably why he took it," said Mr. Cullen. "Oh, I'm fair enough to him, Mr. Hilliard, but as for judgment—" He shook his head firmly. "What made him go to France?"

Hilliard sat back. The gates of truth changed shut.

"That came to him as the logical course," he said shortly. "He'd met with some brother adventurers in New York, and they put the idea into his head. He had no money, so that he worked his passage across on the Mouette, a French tramp, in January, 1915. On the other side, he met a lieutenant of artillery who took a fancy to him. As you undoubtedly know, he spoke French like a native, and that made it easy for him. France is a land of papers, and of records; and papers and records can be created, shuffled—when there's a reason. The reason was that a republic needed men—and the lieutenant was willing to be a forger if that were a condition to his being a patriot. His conception of patriotism was to enlist every able-bodied man in the service of France. But at that time, the war was still rather exclusive as far as Americans were concerned. So that Dicky Morgan disappeared from earth—and there was a new soldier of the sixty-ninth Territorials by the name of Pierre Dutout . . . 'Peter Nobody'.

"What!" said Mr. Cullen.

Hilliard shrugged his shoulders. "I said he told me much about himself. He sailed under his own name, and I dare say you can verify that in New York. But when he landed, he took an alias. He had wanted to start over again, unhampered. Nothing could have been more opportune than this chance. See what it gave him! He simply dropped out of the world. . . . It was the possibility of losing himself utterly that first appealed to him. And there must have been a good cause."

"Yes," said Mr. Cullen absently. "There was. But . . . always the practical, Dick was. That was so like him—to do just that sort of thing, and to do it just that way."

"As nearly as I could gather," said Hilliard, "he had been practically ostracized here. Is that correct?" He noted that Angela flinched at the suggestion, and that her head was drooping very low.

"Y-e-e-s, but there was a good reason for it."

"Oh! dad!" said Angela, pleadingly, below her breath. "Please don't say things like that—I can't stand any more."

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His one ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him."

Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindingly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. . . . Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. 'Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?'

Mr. Cullen switched on a standing lamp; Angela hid her face, and shrank back from the white electric glare.

"Yes—yes," he gave the tiny picture to his daughter. "There's no question about it, Mr. Hilliard."

"That's Dick!" said Angela agonizedly.

"With his signature, of course—you recognize it, do you?"

"It's his handwriting fast enough," conceded Mr. Cullen. He looked up at Hilliard, and his brows were furrowed, as though he were struggling to comprehend what all this had to do with the Cullen family. "Yes. Dramatic boy, he was—always. Shows—don't it?"

"Dramatic—yes. That is—imaginative. Venturesome. And it's a quality that sometimes makes heroes, Mr. Cullen. . . . Would you have called him brave?"

"I'm not sure of that, sir. I—"

"I would!" said Angela. "I would!"

"Foolhardy, often. But brave . . ."

"Wait, then," said Hilliard, motioning. He was transfixed by the vision of Angela Cullen, who had started up in passionate defense of an old-time playmate; her cheeks were flushed, her eyes were shining. She was heartily appealing in her tearless grief and in her loyalty. For the first time, Hilliard could see how the passing years had brought out the woman in her; he could see, under the dazzling light of the porch lamp, from an adorable situation he had been content to view with vehemence thrilled him; his own cheeks reddened, and his heart was abruptly quickened at the sight of her at the same time that it congealed from her father's estimate. "You know," he said, "that bravery under fire has a peculiar reward. It's called a citation. In orders. You think that Morgan wasn't brave, Mr. Cullen. But there's proof. A proof that even you must recognize." He tempered his voice. "For here," he said, whipping a folded paper into view, "is what the republic of France says about him! Here is the record that will endure as long as France does. Here, Mr. Cullen, is Dicky Morgan's citation!"

Dead quiet—for second after second. Angela had turned pale; she was winking hard.

"His . . . citation?" Mr. Cullen mopped his forehead.

When You Buy Poultry Feeds

Don't make it guess-work. You can eliminate the risk by our iron-clad guarantee. The money paid for Purina Chicken Chowder will be refunded if hens, when fed Purina Chicken Chowder with Purina Scratch Feed—the perfect balance for laying hens—as directed, do not lay more eggs than when fed with any other ration.

Most hens get too much grain, a large part of which goes into surplus yolks, which the hen absorbs. This makes the hen too fat and cuts down egg production. 100 lbs. of wheat, corn, oats and barley contain elements for 224 yolks, but only 154 whites. The feed of a laying hen should supply elements for both whites and yolks in equal quantity. Purina rations are rightly balanced. Based on Experiment Station tests, Purina Feeds contain the following:

Feed	Yolks	Whites
Purina Scratch Feed	224	154
Purina Chicken Chowder	224	154
For each dozen	22.4	15.4

Note the larger number and almost equal proportion of whites and yolks in the Purina balanced ration. Purina feeds are scientifically mixed and insure results. In Checkerboard Bag.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning. To flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisons, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad teeth, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headache, biliousness, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanse, purify and freshen the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is really more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do. Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

No More Corn Suffering

"Gets-It" Never Leaves a Corn On Any Foot For Very Long.

The hurting "pep" goes right out of that corn the moment a few drops of "Gets-It" lands thereon. It is through, and "for keeps."

Corns and "Gets-It" Can't Live Together

You'll have no more pain but will notice the corn getting loose and wobbly. In a day or so, you lift it right off without any feeling. That's the end of the corn and of your troubles. Millions have proved "Gets-It" to be the one and only unfailing common sense corn remedy. Why not you?

"Gets-It" costs but a trifle at any drug store and carries a money-back guarantee. Mfd. by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Clearfield and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Stewart Drug Company and Irwin Drug Company.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Don't stay gray! Nobody can tell when you darken gray, faded hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

NURSING AS A PROFESSION IS ON HIGH PLANE

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—Florence Nightingale's spirit will reorganize American nursing in 1920, just as the revered woman herself, in the years following the Crimea, laid the foundation for modern war relief.

As a feature of the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the birth of the Civil War nurse—May 12—a prize of $500 has been offered by the Illinois Council for Nursing Education for the best three-act play by an American author based on incidents in the life of Florence Nightingale. Announcement of the contest was made here today by Miss Ella Phillips Crandall, executive secretary of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing.

The centennial, designed to encourage recruiting for the nursing profession throughout the country, will be celebrated in all the larger cities of the nation by public meetings, pageants and formal ceremonies, according to Miss Crandall.

"It is a particularly happy circumstance that the centennial should come this year, when, as a result of the world war and two disastrous epidemics, the nursing profession has been burdened by unprecedented responsibilities, thus opening up vast new fields of service," said Miss Crandall. "The spirit of the great nurse, as exemplified on the stage, will bring into the profession many high-class recruits."

Pointing out the present need of nurses, Miss Crandall said that while there are now only 8,000 public health nurses in the entire country, more than 50,000 are required by state and federal legislation either passed or pending.

SERVICES OVER REMAINS OF MRS. ROGERS YESTERDAY

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Charles W. W. Rodgers were held yesterday morning. High mass of requiem was said at St. Catherine's church at 7 o'clock and at 8 o'clock mass was said at the Church of our Savior. At 10 o'clock funeral services were held at the family home on East Long avenue. Inadvertently it was announced that the services would be private, thus preventing many friends of the deceased from attending the last rites. Their estate was shown in the many fine floral tributes that were sent to the home. Among the relatives attending the funeral from a distance were the following: Thomas J. Rodgers, brother of Mr. Rodgers, of Greenville, Pa.; Spencer Rhoades, of Indiana, brother of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Coban and Miss Josephine Meek, of Harrisburg, cousins of Mrs. Rodgers; Miss Alice Irwin, of Curwensville.

Mrs. Rodgers was a woman of unusually fine character and the high esteem in which she was held has been shown by the many sincere expressions of regret that have been heard since her untimely death.

Mrs. Charles W. Rodgers, nee Mary Valentine Rhodes, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Rhodes, was born in Northumberland, Pa., Feb. 14, 1875. She died in DuBois on February 13, 1920.

Mrs. Rodgers graduated from Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport, Pa., in 1891, and was married in June, 1895, to the late W. Irvin Shaw, who was United States Consul to Barrancquilla, Columbia, S. A., for three and one-half years. Mr. Shaw died in 1901, and in 1905 Mrs. Shaw became the wife of Charles W. Rodgers, of this city.—DuBois Courier.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backache or Bladder troubles you—Salts is fine for Kidneys.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Messrs. Allan and Howard Norris, who were called here from their home in Frankingrove, Ill., on account of the death of their sister, Mrs. Charles Smith, returned to their western home last Saturday. They were accompanied by Thomas Norris, a brother, who contemplates making his home in the west.

No school was held in the High School Building yesterday forenoon, on account of the rooms being too cold for the comfort of the pupils.

The blizzard which visited this section Saturday and Sunday caught many napping, and in consequence, many water pipes were unfit for duty on Monday morning, having frozen shut during the night.

Jacob Kantar, the man who does the writing for the Industrial and Community Association, and which appears in The Herald from week to week, is in New York this week, purchasing goods for the Kantar store. Jake is a bright, sociable fellow, and has made a host of warm friends in Curwensville.

From what can be gathered the influenza scourge that has been having full sway in Curwensville for the past three weeks, is abating somewhat, and there are not nearly so many cases now as there were a week ago. While there has been some half-dozen deaths in the town so far this month, but three of them can be attributed to a complication of pneumonia, the others dying from causes other than the flu. The larger percentage of flu cases at present have not reached a dangerous stage as yet, and with the proper care and watchfulness, will conquer the disease.

Charles Smith and family desire, through the Curwensville column, to return their sincere thanks to neighbors and friends, for their kindness and help during the illness and funeral of the wife and mother. The family will also remember with gratitude the different organizations, for their kindness and floral tributes.

In conversation with a Curwensville citizen last Saturday, who is very much interested in the Industrial and Community Association movement recently inaugurated, he informed us that in the three manufacturing industries now being operated in this town, not one dollar of Curwensville money was invested, and that they could go at will and Curwensville people would have nothing to say about it. We had never taken this view of the industrial question before, yet we can readily see that this information was correct. Suppose, for argument's sake, that both of the large tanneries here should burn down or be otherwise destroyed, and the owners would say "We will not rebuild our plants in Curwensville, but will go elsewhere." The people could not say nay, because they have no money invested. There is lots of wealth in this town, and if new industries can be induced to locate here, Curwensville people should take stock enough therein so that they should have a voice in the matter as to whether the plant should go or stay.

The lecture delivered in the M. E. church last evening by Dr. O. E. Janney, of Baltimore, was not as largely attended as it should have been, owing to the fact that no admission was charged. The gentleman's discourse was of a high order and proved to be very instructive and interesting to those who were present. The weather turned out to be a hum.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopwood, who reside in Uniontown, Pa., are guests at the home of J. M. McKinley, and also in the home of Howard H. Hopwood.

Mrs. Samuel S. Moore, who spent the past six months in Williamsport, Md., in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bert Miller, and also with a granddaughter, Mrs. Guy Wilson, has returned to her home in this place.

Miss Hattie Spies, of Bedford county, who has been visiting relatives in this town and vicinity for some time, was summoned to Cumberland, Md., last week, on account of illness of kin folks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Noe, of New York, are guests at the Hotel Dime-ling while Mr. Noe is here transacting business.

WINBURNE

Miss Elvira Deviney went to Williamsport, Friday to visit her nephew who is ill in the Williamsport hospital.

Carl Roos has been ill but is now on the job again.

A number of young people attended a party at Peale Saturday evening. All reported a fine time.

The Girls Sewing club met at the home of May Armstrong, Thursday evening.

Miss Grace Bowersox has accepted a position at the H. & C. Telephone company.

Mrs. Burton Williams entertained the Ladies' Aid Society last week.

Mrs. Grace Polly one of Sommerville's accommodating clerks has been off duty, on account of sickness.

Mr. and Mrs. Brian Cronacher have both been ill.

Mrs. T. E. Gray was a Philipsburg shopper Thursday.

George Newton has accepted a message of his daughter, Anna's illness with flu.

Howard Deviney is improving slowly with wishes of his many friends that he will be convalescent.

Miss Hilda Klang has resigned at the Winburne confectionery.

The food sale held Saturday was quite a success.

Anna Smollen has been on the sick list.

Walter Stewart, cashier of Winburne bank, is on the job again.

Mrs. McIndoo has returned to her home after a pleasant visit with her daughters, Mrs. James Huston and Mrs. Leroy Lawrence.

Miss Meller, the community nurse has been kept very busy since her coming to this town.

Miss Jean Pearce is back teaching again after being laid up with the flu for several days.

Robert Kirk of Kylertown, made a business trip to Clearfield Saturday.

Several cases of flu have been reported in Kylertown.

Floy Boyce spent Saturday and Sunday visiting in Clearfield.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

A very pleasant birthday surprise was given Port Harley, at his home on Fourth street last evening, when some twenty five of his friends dropped in on him to wish him well on his journey to the allotted three score and ten mark. Of course Port has a good while to go before reaching that far distant goal, but as he won't say just how far, we won't tell you, either. The evening was spent in playing progressive euchre, Mrs. Frank Connelly and J. L. Shillen carrying off the prizes. Most delicious refreshments were also one of the pleasant features of the evening.

A fine, big baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Young, at their home on Weaver street, Sunday morning last.

Guard Against Jack Frost
with "Exide" Starting & Lighting Service

JACK FROST is a real enemy of the Starting and Lighting Battery. Prepare your battery to resist his attacks by making sure that it is in good condition for its winter's work.

Remember, that your car is much harder to start in winter than in summer, and also that the long winter nights call for greater use of lights.

Drive around to our "Exide" Service Station and let us inspect your battery. We make no charge for this service. Expert attention at this time will assure you good service this winter and save you money.

If you do not run your car this winter—send your battery to us and let us care for it during the cold weather. We will give it proper care and return it to you in the spring in good condition. Our small charge for this service may save you the cost of a new battery in the spring.

"Pierre Dumas, private of the sixtieth Territorial, during the battles of the fourth of May and the days following, has made exhibit of the highest devotion and the greatest courage; and especially by carrying out a volunteer duty, under heavy fire, on the night of the sixth of May, has given to his whole detachment an extraordinary example of loyalty and heroic sacrifice."

She had taken the decoration half fearfully, until she had clanked at Hilliard with an expression so curiously combined of awe and for and jealousy that his own eyes wavered, and he had momentarily averted his gaze. When he had ventured to turn to her again, she had carried one hand to her breast, pressed tightly, she was looking down at the brocade cross on her lap, and her shoulders were shaking perceptibly. Hilliard gripped the arms of his chair, and every muscle of him was drawn taut. . . . his face was sudden tragedy, and horror clutched at him. Angela was crying, stifled, by supreme effort, at the news of Morgan's death, she was crying, now that she believed he had died gloriously. It was a hard problem for him to analyze. . . . it was so magnificently complimentary and inconsistent.

"It would seem to me," said Mr. Cullen, somewhat thickly, "that he wiped the slate clean enough for all practical purposes, anyway." He took the wax cross from Angela's reverent fingers, and examined it curiously. He looked at Angela, and slipped his arm around her; she sat up straighter, and drew a shivering breath. "I may have been wrong in my judgment," said Mr. Cullen soberly.

Hilliard, who had been moodily sunk in reverie, fumbled a third time in his inner coat pocket.

"He sent you a letter," he said, "I suppose you've been wondering, under all the circumstances, what brought me up here to you. It wasn't to apologize particularly; it was to bring you his message. And perhaps I'd better say now that he made me read it."

With Angela peering over his shoulder, Mr. Cullen strained to decipher the uneven penmanship. He began to read aloud:

"Dear Mr. Cullen: 'I am asking Mr. Henry Hilliard to bring you this letter personally. I want him to tell you what I'm not writing, too. And you can tell other people, if you care to.'

"I want you to know that since I've had time to think, I've changed my mind about a good many things. I've come to the conclusion that you were right and I was wrong. Maybe you won't remember the last talk we had together, but I do. You told me then that I didn't have it in me to make good unless I learned that I was about the most worthless young man in town, and the one with the hardest row to hoe in order to make something out of myself, and set out from there. Well, I've learned it. I had to. Of course, I couldn't agree with you at the time. That wouldn't have been expected. But over here I've had one lesson after another. Some of them were pretty bitter, but they've all helped. And since May, when I was hurt, I've had lots of time to think them over.

"I never deserved your kindness and now I can't even express my thanks. Please you to know that this war has taught me what you tried to, and couldn't—that I was as close to zero value at home as a man could be. It's only through this war that I've got any pride in myself, and I'm sort of like Kipling's gentleman ranker—I'm proud of myself because I've done away with all the other kinds of pride I used to have. And I believe I've made good—not as a great general, but as a private soldier. That was the trouble at home—I was only fit to be a private, and I thought I could be a general off hand. You said I'd do well if I learned that, and I have. They gave me the Croix de Guerre, and in a way, that proves it, doesn't it? Notice that they didn't even make me a corporal, though! That's all right—I haven't had enough training yet to be a corporal! It's curious that I'll admit that, isn't it?

"I want you to know that I've thought of you a great deal. I don't blame you for letting me go. I did once, but I don't now. Please, think of me, though, as a man who came through at the finish, even if he'd been pretty hopeless before.

"Hilliard, the best man in the world, has promised to bring you this letter. I hope you'll be glad to see him, and to hear his side of the story. This is my apology and my blessing. If that's worth anything to you, I send a kiss to Angela.

"R. M."

Mr. Cullen ended with a falling inflection, and let the hand which held the letter drop to his knee.

"The letter, as you might guess from the looks of it," said Hilliard, "was written at several different times—according to his strength. I want you to realize, too, Mr. Cullen, that it was no small effort for him to write it. And then I was in Switzerland when he died, and his possessions had all gone to one of those tape-bound bureaux, so that I had a fearful time to identify myself and get what he had meant me to have, and after that, I had to make a sudden trip to Russia, and back to England again. There were delays—delays. I was ill for several months myself; I had typhoid in London. I should have mailed these things to you long ago, but he had begged me to come in person, and I had promised. And every day I expected that in another week or two I should start for home. I feel that I owe you this explanation, and a great plea for forgiveness for what must seem to you like gross indifference on my part. But I landed hardly two weeks ago, and I came up to you at the earliest possible moment."

"In some ways, he was a most remarkable young man," said Mr. Cullen, irrelevantly. "Nobody ever understood why he turned out such a black sheep. Came from a fine old family. I suppose his father was one of the most loved men in Onondaga county. Dick lived for years on his father's reputation, after people stopped noticing him on his own account. Just took advantage of the fact that nobody could quite hear to be harsh to his father's son. But he was always a wild young chap, nothing very bad, except that just too much of anything—including liquor—was just enough for him! Had too quick a temper to be diplomatic enough to hold a job, and didn't care much about working hard, and finally the tide turned, and he began to get treated just as if his father hadn't been a sort of popular idol, and then his disposition soured, and he made some bad mistakes. I gave him the last job he ever had in Syracuse, and had to let him go. . . . and I told him some plain facts when I did. That's what he refers to."

"I assumed," said Hilliard, hesitatingly, "that at one time he had been what you might call . . . disappointed in love? Something was weighing on him—he practically admitted . . . but that was one point that he didn't appear to want to confess, even to me."

"He was engaged to Carol Durant," Angela had taken the cross again, and held it like a precious relic. "She broke it off, just before he went away."

"The day before," added Mr. Cullen. "That was one of the two reasons why he went."

"I see. . . . On account of his habits?"

"That was the gossip," said Mr. Cullen heavily. "Doctor Durant was supposed to have—"

"Didn't he write to her?" asked Angela, raising her eyes.

"Not that I . . . He stopped quickly. 'I trust you'll forgive me, but I'd imagined from various remarks he made at different times, that he was really . . . that he was greatly attached to you.' This last was addressed to Angela, who was both dignified and shaken by the suggestion. Her father, however, nodded in the negative.

"Angela wasn't much more than fifteen, sir. They were great friends; he was very fond of her. No, it was Carol Durant he was engaged to. Didn't he ask you to see her?"

"No."

"But you will, I hope, won't you?"

"You can see Carol here tonight, if you care to," said Angela, uncertainly. "She and . . . and a friend of hers are coming over to talk about another Red Cross drive. Carol's on the committee. They ought to be here any minute now."

"Yes," said Hilliard. "If I'm going to see her, I think I should rather—see her here."

Mr. Cullen sighed sternly, and I shall want to telephone this to the Herald if you don't object. It's the least we can do, all things considered."

"How long are you staying in town, Mr. Hilliard?"

"He made no plans whatsoever," he said, after a slight pause. "I sold my interests to a British syndicate of bankers two months ago. My home is where my baggage is. I'm thinking of taking a day or two to see certain of Dick's friends—the ones he talked about most—and after that, the future is on the knees of the gods."

Mr. Cullen regarded him with sincere respect.

"It would give me great pleasure," he said, a trifle pompously, "if you would be my guest for the time you're here, Mr. Hilliard. It would please me very much indeed." Hilliard's heart pounded.

"And me too," said Angela, gently. Hilliard's heart threatened to suffocate him; not entirely because the game was going so infinitely better than he had dared to hope, but also because it was Angela who entreated him.

"It's wonderfully good of you," he protested, "but I couldn't disturb you to that extent. Thank you, but—"

Mr. Cullen stopped him by an inclusive gesture.

"You won't disturb us in the slightest! I wish you'd come with us, Mr. Hilliard. I should feel much better than having you stay downtown."

"Well—" said Hilliard, dubiously. His soul was filled with unholy joy, but his outward demeanor was deprecatory. "It's ever so kind of you; still—"

"As a favor to me," urged Mr. Cullen.

"As a favor to me," echoed Angela, and Hilliard looked attentively at her, and was obviously swayed. She noticed it; he had intended her to notice it. He gave her a smile which had the power, even in her somber mood, to draw a faint response in kind.

"If you're sure it won't be a hardship to you—"

"Nonsense! It's settled, then, is it? I'll send one of my cars down for your things."

Hilliard's eyes flickered at the ingenuous vanity; he had recently learned that Mr. Cullen had made more money during the past twelve months than during the previous twelve years.

"Well," he said, "if you're so charitable as to insist—"

"I do, sir, I do! You're at the Onondaga, of course?"

Angela, who had been listening intently, started up at the unmistakable echo of footfalls on the walk.

"Here comes Carol!" she gasped.

"And . . . and Jack! Oh, Mr. Hilliard! Oh, dad! Who's going to tell her?"

As Mr. Cullen flinched, Hilliard put out his hand in a motion of supreme restraint. "Whatever Dick Morgan may have been at home," he said, "I knew him after he offered his life for a great ideal, and I'm proud that he was."

"I'm proud," said Hilliard, hesitatingly, "that at one time he had been what you might call . . . disappointed in love? Something was weighing on him—he practically admitted . . . but that was one point that he didn't appear to want to confess, even to me."

Women Need Swamp-Root

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you first wish to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention The Clearfield Progress.

OBITUARY

HOWARD CATHCART

Howard, youngest son of W. W. and Nora Cathcart, died in Akron, Ohio on February 12, 1920, of peritonitis following the influenza.

Deceased had gone to Akron just two weeks before his death and had taken sick immediately.

His brother Ralph was summoned to his bedside at once, and was with him until he passed away.

The body was brought to his home near Olanta on Friday night and interment was made in the Mount Zion cemetery, on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Howard was a promising young man always greeting every one with a pleasant word and smile, and will be greatly missed by his friends, and in his home, being the first one to be taken out of the home circle.

The eastern in which he was held was shown by the many beautiful floral offerings.

He was a member of the Young Peoples Bible Class who attended the service in a body, and also belonged to the P. O. of A. and P. O. S. of A., the latter having charge of the funeral.

W. C. T. U. SOCIAL

There was a large assemblage at the W. C. T. U. Social held in the Trinity M. E. church, for the entertainment of the members and friends, who were trying to add more to their apportionment of the million dollar fund. The amount realized was $70.

The musical part of the program was much enjoyed also an amusing recitation by Mrs. Bouton. The program opened with violin solos by Miss Emily Edmiston, with Miss Alice Smith at the piano. Mrs. Rosenthal sang beautifully, also a duet by Mrs. McKelvey and Mrs. Carrie Smith, was much enjoyed. Miss Grace Underwood also favored with a solo.

The President and Vice President gave short talks. Mrs. McCord also leading in prayer.

Light refreshments were then served in the church parlor, a social time enjoyed and all departed to their homes, well pleased with their entertainment.

LOCAL BOY AWARDED SCHOLARSHIP

ON THE SCREEN

Bert Lytell who plays the male modiste in the de luxe screen classic, Inc., production of the Hatttons' comedy, "Lombardi, Ltd.," took a course in dressmaking. That sounds rather strange, but it is the truth.

Most any time during the production of the picture you could catch Bert emerging from or entering one of the Los Angeles ladies' tailoring establishments with a bundle of patterns and pieces of flimsy material under his arm.

And stranger even, they tell us that he progressed, too. So well that when he started work in the draping scenes of "Lombardi, Ltd.," another stylistic creation was added to the silent drama.

PAIN, PAIN, PAIN STOP NEURALGIA

Rub nerve torture, pain and all misery right out with "St. Jacobs Liniment"

You are to be pitied—but remember that neuralgia torture and pain is the easiest thing in the world to stop. Please don't continue to suffer; it's so needless. Get from your druggist the small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Liniment;" pour a little in your hand and gently rub the "tender nerve" or sore spot, and instantly—yes, immediately—all pain, ache and soreness is gone. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain—it is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin. Nothing else gives relief so quickly. It never fails to stop neuralgia pain instantly, whether in the face, head or any part of the body. Don't suffer!

To Prevent Flu and Colds Three Rules You Should Observe

- (1) Sleep 8 hours—With windows wide open.
- (2) Eat wisely—exercise regularly—don't worry.
- (3) Avoid crowds and persons having colds

Flu this Year is Milder

The rules given above, recommended by the New York City Board of Health, are guides to good health at all times. Particularly they are followed just now, when influenza is again abroad in the land. Authorities agree, however, that the flu this year is less severe than in the last epidemic—the attacks are shorter and the death rate lower. In fact, many physicians insist that the epidemic now being reported from so many sections are not flu at all, but simply the old-fashioned grip.

Keep the Air Passages Healthy

While we know very little more about the flu now than we did last year—the germ itself has never been positively identified—still most authorities agree that the flu germs are breathed in. If the system is in good shape and the membranes or lining of the air passages are in healthy condition—these germs are thrown off.

A good plan is to melt a little Vick's VapoRub in a spoon, night and morning, and inhale the vapors, also apply a little up the nostrils several times a day, especially just before being exposed to crowds.

Treat All Colds Promptly

Above all, keep free from colds, as colds irritate the lining of the air passages and make them real breeding grounds for germs. Prompt use of Vick's VapoRub aids in preventing colds. For head colds, sore throat or hoarseness, rub Vick's well over the throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. For deep chest colds, severe sore throat or bronchitis, hot wet towels should first be applied to the throat, chest and back between the shoulder blades, to open the pores. Then Vick's should be rubbed in over the entire chest and back. It is especially good for the standard time-tested remedy Camphor—Menthol—Eucalyptus—Thyme, etc.—as that which the salve is applied to the body has these ingredients are absorbed in the form of vapors.

Vick's is particularly recommended for children's colds, coughs, etc., since it is externally applied and therefore can be used safely and often without the slightest harmful effects.

The best evidence of the value of Vick's is the steadily increasing number of people who have been converted to the use of this "old side" treatment.

Beginning with the outbreak of a small retail drug store, the use of Vick's has grown year by year—state by state—until now more than 17 million jars and tins are annually used. And this is not the limit that Vick's is a new form of health tonic to many folks in the South and West. Vick's can be had at all druggists in three sizes—50c, 75c, or $1.25.

NOTICE

All women of the town and county are urged to become members of the Woman's Hospital Auxiliary. The meetings are held the first Wednesday of each month, at the Nurses' Home. The dues are $1.25 a year. Please send your name to Mrs. W. I. Swoope, and be present at the next meeting of the Auxiliary. F16-52c

U. S. WILL STAND PAT ON ADRIATIC PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The United States will continue to support the rights of the Jugo-Slavs in its dispute over Fiume it was announced today at the White House. This government will not withdraw from the Adriatic controversy it was hinted.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The final drafting of the Allied reply to President Wilson's note probably will be completed at today's session of the Council of Premiers it was learned semi-officially today. No intimation as to the contents of the reply will be made until it has been received by the President, it was said. There is little likelihood that the American representatives will be called into session, it was said.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The Allied reply to President Wilson's Adriatic note will be dispatched to Washington this afternoon it was learned today. The note was approved at this morning's session of the Council of Premiers.

PRESIDENT "JUST AS USUAL AND CONTINUES TO IMPROVE"—GRAYSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—President Wilson is "just, as usual today and continues to improve," Dr. Cary T. Grayson, his personal physician declared today in denying the reports that the President is suffering a relapse and that Dr. F. X. Dercum, Philadelphia nerve specialist, had been summoned to the White House shortly after midnight. "The President was up early today," said Dr. Grayson.

HITCHCOCK DEFY TO REPUBLICANS HASTENS CLIMAX ON TREATY FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Senator Hitchcock, Democratic leader, has notified Senator Lodge that consideration of present efforts of ratifying the treaty are hopeless unless the Republicans will accept some of the Democratic proposals for compromise on Article Ten or offer some compromise of their own which the Democrats will accept, it was learned today. Hitchcock took this means of bringing about a speedy climax as forecasted yesterday by the United Press.

PITTSBURGH LEADER LOSES BY FIRE

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 17.—Fire today threatened to destroy the offices of the Pittsburgh Leader and adjoining buildings on Fifth Avenue near Smithfield street. The total loss is estimated at more than $10,000. Guests at the Hotel Henry rushed into the streets when their rooms were filled with smoke. The blaze was discovered on the first floor of the building. Its cause is unknown. The Hotel Henry and Avenue Theatre were slightly damaged.

BENSON TO HEAD SHIPPING BOARD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Rear Admiral W. S. Benson, retired, will be the new chairman of the United States Shipping Board it was announced today at the White House.

FORMER WELL KNOWN RESIDENT DIES IN COLORADO

Deputy Sheriff Frank S. Gilliland received a telegram at noon from his brother John L. Gilliland announcing the death of his wife, which occurred at their home in La Junta, Colorado, this morning.

Mrs. Gilliland was a daughter of the late Geoffrey Fisher, of Karlsruhe township and a sister of Henry E. Fisher, of Nichols street, and resided in Clearfield for a number of years. Some ten or twelve years ago on account of Mrs. Gilliland's failing health the family located in La Junta, where Mr. Gilliland has been successfully engaged in business ever since.

The deceased was an earnest Christian woman and a devout member of the Lutheran church. She was ever the tender loving wife and mother and possessed an exceptionally wide circle of admiring friends in this section, who sympathize deeply with her family in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. Gilliland was about 46 years of age and is survived by her husband, two sons and three daughters. She is also survived by one brother and seven sisters, viz: Henry E. Fisher, of Clearfield; Mrs. William Henderson, of Alliance, Ohio; Mrs. Anna Burley of Tyrone; Miss Hannah, of Tyrone; Mrs. Robert Waring, of Jersey City, N. J.; Mrs. Wrenham Fleming, of Tyrone; Mrs. B. S. Dine, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Edward Manning, of La Junta, Colorado.

STATE COLLEGE IS TO BE MECCA FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Feb. 17.—The program of the Pennsylvania State College for the coming summer will contain something of interest to all persons who are in any way connected with the public schools of the state. The scope of the summer session has been enlarged so as to include, in addition to the regular six-weeks courses for teachers, a school for training continuation school teachers, a school for county and assistant county superintendents, and a school for supervisors and directors of home economics and agriculture in the vocational schools. There will be special courses for librarians and a series of camps for those who are interested in the work of the Boy Scouts. Steps have also been taken to provide instruction for the school directors of the state.

Practically the entire facilities of the college will be in use during the summer months while the regular student body is enjoying the vacation period. To provide for the varied forms of activities it will be necessary to supplement the faculty by bringing in experts from other fields and institutions. Among those who have already been secured are Dr. Edward C. Snyder, Commissioner of Vocational Education for the state of California; Dr. P. M. Harbold, formerly head of the Millersville State Normal school; Miss Jane E. McKenzie, of the McKelvey school, Pittsburgh; Miss Margery Lyon, of the Minneapolis Vocational school for girls; William T. Ellis, the well known traveler and writer, and Dr. Edward Howard Griggs of New York. Because of the variety of work offered and the excellent location of State College for summer study, the Centre county institution, during July and August, will become the Mecca of a large number of people working in and for the schools of the state.

BOYS AND GIRLS OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO MEET HERE

On February 26th, boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 22 will gather in Clearfield from all over the county, to discuss methods and form plans for improving conditions in their communities. The conference will be made up of representatives of the Sunday Schools of the county. Each Sunday School may send five delegates, two of whom will be girls, two boys and one an adult.

The purpose of the conference is stated to be the presentation of proved plans and methods of work for young people in the Sunday schools; to make use of the latent energy of the boys and girls, and to train them for leadership.

The leaders of the conference are: R. A. Waite, of Chicago, Superintendent of Boys' Work of the International Sunday School Association, and P. G. Orwig, of Philadelphia, State Young People's Superintendent.

Every Sunday School in the county is urged to name its delegates soon. Only properly registered delegates will be admitted to the meetings. The conference will meet in the First Baptist church, Clearfield. The first session opens at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

STOCKS OPEN WEAK

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The stock market opened weak today. There was continued liquidation in General Motors when that stock on first sale broke 3% and 33 to 225% and 226. Crucible was again the target of the bears and sold for 197 and 195 off 3 1/2 and 5 1/2. Republic Steel was off 3% at 100%. Bethlehem B at 85 1/2 off 3%. United States Steel at 97 1/2 up 3%. Northern Pacific at 71 1/2 off 1/2.

ATTACK ON MAN MAY RESULT IN HIS DEATH

Elwood Z. Mark Is Victim of Assault At Corner of Ninth And Dorey Streets Today

ATTACKED WITHOUT WARNING

Elwood Z. Mark was the victim of an assault this afternoon at the corner of 9th and Dorey street that may result in his death.

While turning the corner he was attacked without a sign of warning by M. W. Barker, who, as far as it could be learned this afternoon, had never before had a word with Mark, and did not even know his name. Although Mark was placed in a condition that may result fatally for him in the near future, he was able to leave the spot without assistance and hurried on his way, as though he had been the one guilty of the assault, instead of the guilty one being Barker, as the facts afterwards proved.

Although the assault was witnessed by many persons there was no effort on the part of anyone to stop Barker after he left Mark, and the police so far have taken no action in the matter. This is generally ascribed, however, to the fact that the concealed weapon used by Barker, was not seen by anyone who witnessed the assault, and, therefore, the police feel that they have no evidence, and that a prosecution could not result favorably without the testimony of Mark, who it was said is willing to let the matter drop in view of the fact if he recovers from the attack he will call it quits.

Conditions Won't Remain

That this condition will not always be the result of these attacks, is said to be fast approaching, for it is declared by the authorities who know, that in the not too distant future, the people will see to it that such assaults are punished just as are those who attack with knives or gun, or other visible weapons. The weapon used by Barker today was a mass of pneumonia, influenza, scarlet fever, diphtheria and other germs, which were in his spit in his mouth and throat. But because Barker is a particularly robust man, or because he happens to have been so frequently in contact with these germs that he has created an immunity (a defense) against them, he was not ill at the time of the assault. The weapon, however, may prove to be as deadly to Mark as though it had been a revolver pressed into his stomach and fired by Barker.

Mark will harbor the results of this assault today, and within five or six days, he may prove unable to resist them, and then he will be succumbed by them. If circumstances are right he will get well after having been put to the loss of time, loss of employment, loss of money and given the trouble and suffering of going through serious sickness because Barker was too thoughtless and even criminally indifferent to the rights and security of others, to have covered his mouth with a handkerchief when he coughed these germs into the face of Mark.

Asked today if the facts of this incident warranted civil or criminal action, several of the local physicians vehemently declared that nothing ever truer had been written, and that it will not be long before the law will allow any person so attacked and assaulted by another, to bring criminal proceedings just as surely and quickly and resultfully as though the attack had been made with a revolver, a knife or other deadly weapon.

One physician said: "There is little difference in shooting at a person or coughing directly into his or her face. The marksman-ship might be bad and the person not be hit, and the cougher MIGHT not have deadly disease germs in his or her throat, but the chances are more likely that the shooter would miss, than that the throat or mouth of any cougher is free from dangerous carry-on germs. Coughed out spray takes its place beside machine gun bullets for deadliness."

The names in the above story are fictitious—but the facts are true.

GRAMPIAN FAIR ASSOCIATION IS IN FINE SHAPE

At a meeting of the Grampian Fair Association held in Grampian Thursday evening, February 12, the following officers were elected:

President, Hon. D. D. Miller; vice president, B. P. Williams; treasurer, Dora Helper; secretary, T. L. Wall; assistant secretary, T. E. Moore; members of the executive committee to serve 2 years, W. T. Thorpe and J. P. Rowles. M. R. Woodel and J. W. Scheurman are the hold over members of the committee.

The auditors report showed that the finances of the association are in a flourishing condition, with a substantial balance in the treasury, part of which will be used to make a further payment on the Merry-go-round purchased last fall.

Much enthusiasm was displayed for a great fair this year, and plans for it were discussed, and a meeting of the executive committee was called for the next meeting.

At this meeting of the executive committee the dates for the fair were fixed on September 22, 23 and 24, 1920.

Plans were made for getting out the annual premium list very soon and the leaflets containing the school and garden work for the children will be supplied to the schools in a week, so that preparation may begin at once. All schools and children in the county are invited to participate in the fair, and interested teachers and directors, especially in country districts, are requested to write to the secretary of the Juvenile Fair at Grampian for information and leaflets.

The Association was incorporated just before the fair was held last fall.

Every effort will be made to provide excellent entertainment and harmless amusements as well as instruction at the fair, for both old and young.

COURT RESTRAINS SACRIFICE OF GERMAN SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The supreme court of the District of Columbia today called a halt on the shipping board's proposed sale of the thirty ships taken from Germany. When Mr. Hearst's application to have the shipping board enjoined from making the sale was argued in the district supreme court Justice Bailey announced that he would grant the application immediately unless the board would agree to delay the sale pending hearing on his decision Friday. The shipping board consented to suspend the sale. The senate, after a highly interesting debate, adopted the McKellar resolution requiring the sale of the ships postponed until authorized by Congress.

The McKellar resolution also instructs the shipping board to make a full report to congress of the circumstances of its proposal to auction off the ships and to "accept the $28,000,000 bid."

Despite the proceedings in court and in the senate in opposition to its proposal to sell the ships, the shipping board today went ahead with its so-called auction to the extent of receiving bids.

ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICES

Tomorrow being Ash Wednesday, services in St. Andrews church will be as follows:

Penitential Office and Holy Communion, 10 a. m.
Evening Prayer and Sermon at 7:30 p. m.

There will also be a service on Friday evening at 7:30, at which time the Rector will begin a series of Lectures on the Apostles Creed. The subject Friday evening will be "History of the Creed."

The full Lenten program will be announced the first of the week.

P. A. Harris and wife have returned to their home on River street from a visit to West Decatur where they were called on account of the sudden serious illness of W. H. Meno, who suffered an attack of nose bleed, but is now recovering nicely.

Caillaux Put on Trial Charged With Treason

PARIS, Feb. 17. (United Press).—The trial of Joseph Caillaux, former premier of France, charged with high treason—or paraphrased through courtesy as "plotting against the external safety of the state"—was to be called today before the High Court of the French senate. The penalty on conviction is usually death.

The trial probably will be the last of importance in the long series of court proceedings connected with the complicated drama of treason and intrigue by which the French government charged such men as Bola Pasha, Louis J. Malvy, Pierre Lenoire and Caillaux attempted to carry on a defeatist campaign when Germany was uttering hardest at the gates of Verdun. They wanted Germany to come so near to winning the war that Caillaux, as leader of the enemies of the administration at Paris, might be called to preserve the public, thus embarrassing Premier Clemenceau.

Trial of Caillaux was decided upon on September 16 last by the French senate committee investigating the defeatist movement. The basis of the charges against the former premier, as summed up in the formal report of the senatorial committee—corresponding to an indictment in American court procedure—follows:

"Political notes discovered in a Florence safe throw a flood of light on M. Caillaux's real intentions. They prove he had conceived a plan to seize power when, on making the public believe the Germans were going to take Verdun and win the war, his followers would put him forward as France's savior."

He had every means to execute this plan. These cannot form the basis of a charge but justice has the right to ask if it is duty to take account of them."

The indictment then pictures Caillaux from the time he left the senate as a paymaster, in which he had collected a few months' pension, and follows him through all his plotting. It shows him with an insatiable curiosity and desire for power, directed to the ends of his selfish and ambitious aims.

He said he went to Berlin, Berlin on an obscure mission for the government and while there met Count Bernburg, German ambassador, and gave him his views on the war for transmission to the German government. Then came his operations with M. de Mannheim, who, it was alleged, furnished cash toward the defeatist campaign being waged in France. Rouge, under direction of Louis J. Malvy. There were many instances of a collusion with Bernburg.

It was Clemenceau who called the master plotter. He charged Caillaux with a speech in the senate against the minister of finance, who was named by Caillaux. One other instance of alleged treason was given, the loss of a letter on January 12, 1918, when he had piled up volumes of evidence against himself during his testimony in the trials of Malvy, Berthelot, and others, he was arrested and jailed in the Prison de Santé, charged with treason.

TIRE SALESMAN IS PUNCTURED WHEN JURY MAKES FIND

James Rice, of Milton or Harrisburg, who launched forth in Clearfield several weeks ago on an automobile tire selling campaign not entirely in accord with the Act of Assembly made and provided in such cases, had about all the wind let out of his inner tube yesterday afternoon by a jury in criminal court.

Rice alleged to be working for a Philadelphia tire concern, but the Philadelphia concern didn't seem to think so and came away up here to Clearfield to prosecute him for making such assertion. With the assistance of District Attorney Arnold Rice's plan of campaign—wherein he got the money and the buyer just the signed and sealed contract—was placed before the jury, minus all helpful embellishments, and despite the best efforts of J. Mitchell Chase, Esq., who was appointed by the court to defend Rice, the jury took the District Attorney's "biased" view and the verdict made another "innocent man" tired. Judge Bell then added to the gaiety of the occasion by retiring the tire man to Sheriff Gorman's tavern for an eleven month period, also assessing him $1.00 fine and costs of prosecution.

Rice had been in durance vile previously on an occasion or two and had more or less experience sagging the occasional bean in the official and regular soup ration.

Judge Bell has appointed John Burns and William Wortz auditors of Grampian borough to take the places made vacant by the death of Ashley McCracken and resignation of J. C. Hopburn.

Judge G. G. Sloan, of Clarion county, who presided at the trial of the suit, has filed an opinion and decree, in the Prothonotary's office in which he refuses a new trial in the case of Holmes & McHenry vs the U. S. Railroad Administration and P. R. R. Co. In this case the jury awarded Holmes & McHenry $300 for damages to one of their trucks when struck by a train near the P. R. R. station in Clearfield, July 19, 1919.

Warren Cross, of Coalport, was convicted of adultery by a jury in criminal court yesterday afternoon. Cross appeared to have been indiscreet enough to have transferred his reflections publicly, from his wife to an affinity. Miss Maude Richard, who was present at the trial, lending aid and comfort to the defendant. The evidence showed that Cross had been much more than unusually indiscreet, and in consequence of the array of facts set forth by the Commonwealth's witnesses, the jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged.

monwealth's witnesses, the jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged.

The case of Com. vs. John Mervich and Mary Motrowski in which the defendants were charged with assault and battery by Mervich on Motrowski, occupied the attention of the jury in this forenoon. The jury returned a verdict upon their verdict in the afternoon.

The parties in this case are John DuBois. On a Sunday evening, November Mrs. Motrowski and Mervich went to the main road on public highway just outside of DuBois over the Maglioli family out which was passing in the neighborhood. Mrs. Motrowski chided a few stones at the cow and as was to be expected Mervich got mad and about that time all Mrs. Motrowski appeared on the scene, as Mervich describes it, "like a cat." Between the two and a "law convenient" incident, Mervich was at down for the count with several sundry cuts about his head and face. He remained in the hospital and where he fell and believed by members of his own family and the suit followed.

The jury decided that Mervich was mistaken about old man Mervich and acquitted the defendant. They also were of the opinion that Mervich took his life in his own hands when he remained within and hundred yards of where a woman was throwing stones at a cow and while they acquitted the charge of assault and battery, they found that she pay half the costs for having the stone and with the prosecutor pay the other half for getting hit.

This was case No. 5, which was tried last week and ended the trial for this week.

The Grampian ass. court murder cases will be tried next week.

Would Spare Grandpa's Pajamas. The other day my aunt was writing to her mother, and she said to the little boy, who had recently received a few of his letters of interest, "Don't you want to wrap your grandpa in grandma and show her how much you have learned?" "Gee, grandpa is an old man and he has a long time since she was in school, and probably wouldn't know what she was."—Exchange.

Tidiness of the Bed. No creature is more tidy than an ant. A well-known company says that toilet articles made of wood and hand-tooled leather, last longer, stronger and even wash and soap. Giving in Service. "Every woman, and every man, for that matter, should do something to justify her or his existence. Unless a woman gives as much as she takes in service she is a liability, and not an asset to the community."—The Father Lovejoy.

Now it is proposed to interne the Kaiser on some island thousands of miles from the scene of his former home. Let our hunter's association call attention to the beauties of Birch Island on the Susquehanna. We venture to predict that there would be a great deal of duck hunting in that vicinity.

A Burlington, N. J., pastor wants all religious people of New Jersey to pray for their war governor. Perhaps a reading of Civil War history and its lessons would be more to the point. We wonder if the governor of New Jersey does not have an exaggerated opinion of his little realm. His state strikes us as just a pimple on the outermost part of Uncle Sam's nose.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS CONFERENCE

Calling a conference of boy and girl workers in the Sunday Schools of Clearfield County is a step which should do much to fill the gap in Sunday school interest which exists in almost every school with boys and girls of the teen age.

It is an exceedingly hard matter to hold the interest of a boy when he passes the age of sixteen and the lack of sufficient Sunday school adult workers is probably best accounted for by the defection of youngsters just at the age when they are most receptive to training if their interest can be held. Failure of the school to hold the boy and girl is not the fault of the school, the lesson leaflets or the teachers. We have noticed that when the parents are there, the children are there; not by compulsion, but rather by the example set by parents. It is not an uncommon thing for a boy to tell a teacher that he is in Sunday School because he was compelled to come and in nine of ten of such instances the parent will not be present. Where a boy likes to attend Sunday School it is usually found that the parents are there also.

The conference of boys and girls here is of greater importance than the regular Sunday school convention and it is to be hoped that every Sunday school in the district will sense the real importance of it and have delegates on hand. It is also of paramount importance that the Clearfield Sunday schools make an extra effort to open their homes and their hearts to the delegates.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE

Clearfield's housing problems have been the subject of discussion in these columns many times during the past year and the problems have been growing more acute with every passing day. It is indeed surprising that a community of the progressiveness and wealth of Clearfield should allow conditions to get to such a point as they now are. We have seen dozens of good, substantial families come here with steady employment who were forced to seek boarding and rooms for months at a time. We have seen others who saw opportunities here but could not find homes. Literally hundreds of young men have married and are living with their parents because they are unable to get only a few rooms to feather as the nest.

Clearfield has gained the reputation of being a town which does not want any more people because those who are in a position to make room for more people have not done so. Clearfield is now getting to be known as a town that does not take care of the people she has. A "For Rent" sign is now as hard to find as a "beer sign." We grant that this is a healthy condition—for the landlord—but for the man who must rent it means heavy financial loss. Worse than that, for the general business of the community it means stagnation.

There are enough families without homes in Clearfield today to fill twenty-five new houses at once. These twenty-five new homes would add no small benefit to the community.

As we stand today, Clearfield can do no better than stand still. Can we afford to stand still?

The MAN NOBODY KNEW OF HOLWORTHY HALL.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—In a base hospital at Neuilly, France, his face disfigured beyond recognition, an American soldier serving in the French army attracts attention by his deep despondency. Asked by the surgeons for a photograph to guide them in making over his face, he offers in derision a picture of the Savior, bidding them take that as a model. They do so, making a remarkable likeness.

CHAPTER II.—Invalided home, on the boat he meets Martin Harmon, New York broker, who is attracted by his remarkable features. The ex-soldier gives his name as "Henry Hilliard," and his home as Syracuse, New York. He left there under a cloud, and is embittered against his former fellow townsmen. Harmon makes him a proposition to sell mining stocks in Syracuse, concealing his identity. He accepts it, seeing in it a chance to make good and prove he has been underestimated.

"Well, there he was—wounded, and marooned in France, and with a bad conscience. Perhaps you can understand why he got my sympathy."

"Poor Dick!" said Angela, barely above a whisper, and Hilliard, looking across at her, was stirred by vague intuitions which rendered him guiltily uncomfortable. It had simply never occurred to him in announcing the death of a man who had run away from Syracuse in disgrace, he might find pity and forgiveness waiting for expression. Was there still an opportunity for him to change his tactics, to admit that it was only the unregenerate soul and the outward countenance of Dicky Morgan that had perished, and to maintain that a new being, a penitent and resolute being, had arisen phoenixlike to make atonement for the wasted years that had been ended by shrapnel fire from the Huns? And suppose he did so, what would they say? If public opinion were to model itself upon the sorrow of poor little Angela Cullen, was it not better to confess at once, to wipe the slate clean, and to begin afresh? Had he said so much that the pathway to truth was closed—or was a lie well stuck to better than the truth, half told?

Morals, which are nothing but negative virtues anyway, hang on trifles. Hilliard was tottering on the uttermost edge of decision—and Mr. Cullen, flung the weight of an aimless charge against him, and settled the matter out of hand.

"He certainly had plenty to be sorry for," said Mr. Cullen.

"Oh, dad!" said Angela, with a quick intake of her breath. "A church-goer and a communicant, was Mr. Cullen. A giver of alms, and a friend to his friends—but in forgetting that the evil that men do should not be rightfully allowed to live on after them, and in remembering, perhaps too clearly at that moment, the final interview he had held with Dicky Morgan, Mr. Cullen throttled repentance into a state of furious helplessness, and brought back Hilliard to his senses."

"Yes," said Hilliard, "he had plenty to be sorry for, and he was. Of his troubles here, I'm not capable of sitting as judge. Instead, I sat as confessor. So that you'll be more interested in that part of his life which you evidently haven't known about, and I have. He left here, I think, in December. He hadn't any fixed purpose; all he wanted was to find a place where he could begin over again on a fresh basis, and make a man of himself. . . . For that much, at least, you can give him credit."

"And I do," said Cullen, approvingly. Hilliard, swept again by the nearness of deliverance from his doubts, leaned forward. A strong indorsement of Morgan's ambition at this juncture might yet have brought about a re-education.

"I'm glad you do, Mr. Cullen. . . . I think myself it was the only course he could have taken." He hung perilously upon the response; it would either justify or condemn his present attitude.

"That's probably why he took it," said Mr. Cullen. "Oh, I'm fair enough to him, Mr. Hilliard, but as for judgment—" He shook his head firmly. "What made him go to France?"

Hilliard sat back. The gates of truth changed shut.

"That came to him as the logical course," he said shortly. "He'd met with some brother adventurers in New York, and they put the idea into his head. He had no money, so that he worked his passage across on the Mouette, a French tramp, in January, 1915. On the other side, he met a lieutenant of artillery who took a fancy to him. As you undoubtedly know, he spoke French like a native, and that made it easy for him. France is a land of papers, and of records; and papers and records can be created, shuffled—when there's a reason. The reason was that a republic needed men—and the lieutenant was willing to be a forger if that were a condition to his being a patriot. His conception of patriotism was to enlist every able-bodied man in the service of France. But at that time, the war was still rather exclusive as far as Americans were concerned. So that Dicky Morgan disappeared from earth—and there was a new soldier of the sixty-ninth Territorials by the name of Pierre Dutout . . . 'Peter Nobody'."

"What!" said Mr. Cullen. Hilliard shrugged his shoulders. "I said he told me much about himself. He sailed under his own name, and I dare say you can verify that in New York. But when he landed, he took an alias. He had wanted to start over again, unhampered. Nothing could have been more opportune than this chance. See what it gave him! He simply dropped out of the world. . . . It was the possibility of losing himself utterly that first appealed to him. And there must have been a good cause."

"Yes," said Mr. Cullen absently. "There was. But . . . always the practical, Dick was. That was so like him—to do just that sort of thing, and to do it just that way."

"As nearly as I could gather," said Hilliard, "he had been practically ostracized here. Is that correct?" He noted that Angela flinched at the suggestion, and that her head was drooping very low.

"Y-e-e-s, but there was a good reason for it."

"Oh! dad!" said Angela, pleadingly, below her breath. "Please don't say things like that—I can't stand any more."

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him." Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindingly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. . . . Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. 'Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?'"

Mr. Cullen switched on a standing lamp; Angela hid her face, and shrank back from the white electric glare.

"Yes—yes," he gave the tiny picture to his daughter. "There's no question about it, Mr. Hilliard."

"That's Dick!" said Angela agonizedly.

"With his signature, of course—you recognize it, do you?"

"It's his handwriting fast enough," conceded Mr. Cullen. He looked up at Hilliard, and his brows were furrowed, as though he were struggling to comprehend what all this had to do with the Cullen family. "Yes. Dramatic boy, he was—always. Shows—don't it?"

"Dramatic—yes. That is—imaginative. Venturesome. And it's a quality that sometimes makes heroes, Mr. Cullen. . . . Would you have called him brave?"

"I'm not sure of that, sir. I—"

"I would!" said Angela. "I would!"

"Foolhardy, often. But brave . . ."

"Wait, then," said Hilliard, motioning. He was transfixed by the vision of Angela Cullen, who had started up in passionate defense of an old-time playmate; her cheeks were flushed, her eyes were shining. She was heartily appealing in her tearless grief and in her loyalty. For the first time, Hilliard could see how the passing years had brought out the woman in her; he could see, under the dazzling light of the porch lamp, that an adorable woman he had once loved was before him.

He remembered the thrill of his own cheeks reddened, and his heart was abruptly quickened at the sight of her at the same time that it congealed from her father's estimate. "You know," he said, "that bravery under fire has a peculiar reward. It's called a citation. In orders. You think that Morgan wasn't brave, Mr. Cullen. But there's proof. A proof that even you must recognize." He tempered his voice. "For here," he said, whipping a folded paper into view, "is what the republic of France says about him! Here is the record that will endure as long as France does. Here, Mr. Cullen, is Dicky Morgan's citation!"

Dead quiet—for second after second. Angela had turned pale; she was winking hard.

"His . . . citation?" Mr. Cullen mopped his forehead.

When You Buy Poultry Feeds

Don't make it guess-work. You can eliminate the risk by our iron-clad guarantee. The money paid for Purina Chicken Chowder will be refunded if hens, when fed Purina Chicken Chowder with Purina Scratch Feed—the perfect balance for laying hens—as directed, do not lay more eggs than when fed with any other ration.

Most hens get too much grain, a large part of which goes into surplus yolks, which the hen absorbs. This makes the hen too fat and cuts down egg production. 100 lbs. of wheat, corn, oats and barley contain elements for 224 yolks, but only 154 whites. The food of a laying hen should supply elements for both whites and yolks in equal quantity. Purina rations are rightly balanced. Based on Experiment Station tests, Purina Feeds contain the following:

Feed	Yolks	Whites
Purina Scratch Feed	224	154
Purina Chicken Chowder	224	154
Purina Corn Meal	224	154

Note the larger number and almost equal proportion of whites and yolks in the Purina balanced ration. Purina feeds are scientifically mixed and insure results. In Checkerboard Bag.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning. To flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisons, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad teeth, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headache, biliousness, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanse, purify and freshen the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is really more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do. Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

No More Corn Suffering

"Gets-It" Never Leaves a Corn On Any Foot For Very Long.

The hurting "pep" goes right out of that corn the moment a few drops of "Gets-It" lands thereon. It is through, and "for keeps."

Corns and "Gets-It" Can't Live Together

You'll have no more pain but will notice the corn getting loose and wobbly. In a day or so, you lift it right off without any feeling. That's the end of the corn and of your troubles. Millions have proved "Gets-It" to be the one and only unfailing common sense corn remedy. Why not you?

"Gets-It" costs but a trifle at any drug store and carries a money-back guarantee. Mfd. by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Clearfield and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Stewart Drug Company and Irwin Drug Company.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Don't stay gray! Nobody can tell when you darken gray, faded hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

NURSING AS A PROFESSION IS ON HIGH PLANE

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—Florence Nightingale's spirit will reorganize American nursing in 1920, just as the revered woman herself, in the years following the Crimea, laid the foundation for modern war relief.

As a feature of the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the birth of the Civil War nurse—May 12—a prize of $500 has been offered by the Illinois Council for Nursing Education for the best three-act play by an American author based on incidents in the life of Florence Nightingale. Announcement of the contest was made here today by Miss Ella Phillips Crandall, executive secretary of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing.

The centennial, designed to encourage recruiting for the nursing profession throughout the country, will be celebrated in all the larger cities of the nation by public meetings, pageants and formal ceremonies, according to Miss Crandall.

"It is a particularly happy circumstance that the centennial should come this year, when, as a result of the world war and two disastrous epidemics, the nursing profession has been burdened by unprecedented responsibilities, thus opening up vast new fields of service," said Miss Crandall. "The spirit of the great nurse, as exemplified on the stage, will bring into the profession many high-class recruits."

Pointing out the present need of nurses, Miss Crandall said that while there are now only 8,000 public health nurses in the entire country, more than 50,000 are required by state and federal legislation either passed or pending.

SERVICES OVER REMAINS OF MRS. ROGERS YESTERDAY

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Charles W. W. Rodgers were held yesterday morning. High mass of requiem was said at St. Catherine's church at 7 o'clock and at 8 o'clock mass was said at the Church of our Savior. At 10 o'clock funeral services were held at the family home on East Long avenue. Inadvertently it was announced that the services would be private, thus preventing many friends of the deceased from attending the last rites. Their estate was shown in the many fine floral tributes that were sent to the home. Among the relatives attending the funeral from a distance were the following: Thomas J. Rodgers, brother of Mr. Rodgers, of Greenville, Pa.; Spencer Rhoades, of Indiana, brother of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Coban and Miss Josephine Meek, of Harrisburg, cousins of Mrs. Rodgers; Miss Alice Irwin, of Curwensville.

Mrs. Rodgers was a woman of unusually fine character and the high esteem in which she was held has been shown by the many sincere expressions of regret that have been heard since her untimely death.

Mrs. Charles W. Rodgers, nee Mary Valentine Rhodes, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Rhodes, was born in Northumberland, Pa., Feb. 14, 1875. She died in DuBois on February 13, 1920.

Mrs. Rodgers graduated from Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport, Pa., in 1891, and was married in June, 1895, to the late W. Irvin Shaw, who was United States Consul to Barrancuilla, Columbia, S. A., for three and one-half years. Mr. Shaw died in 1901, and in 1905 Mrs. Shaw became the wife of Charles W. Rodgers, of this city.—DuBois Courier.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backache or Bladder troubles you—Salts is fine for Kidneys.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Messrs. Allan and Howard Norris, who were called here from their home in Frankingrove, Ill., on account of the death of their sister, Mrs. Charles Smith, returned to their western home last Saturday. They were accompanied by Thomas Norris, a brother, who contemplates making his home in the west.

No school was held in the High School Building yesterday forenoon, on account of the rooms being too cold for the comfort of the pupils.

The blizzard which visited this section Saturday and Sunday caught many napping, and in consequence, many water pipes were unfit for duty on Monday morning, having frozen shut during the night.

Jacob Kantar, the man who does the writing for the Industrial and Community Association, and which appears in The Herald from week to week, is in New York this week, purchasing goods for the Kantar store. Jake is a bright, sociable fellow, and has made a host of warm friends in Curwensville.

From what can be gathered the influenza scourge that has been having full sway in Curwensville for the past three weeks, is abating somewhat, and there are not nearly so many cases now as there were a week ago. While there has been some half-dozen deaths in the town so far this month, but three of them can be attributed to a complication of pneumonia, the others dying from causes other than the flu. The larger percentage of flu cases at present have not reached a dangerous stage as yet, and with the proper care and watchfulness, will conquer the disease.

Charles Smith and family desire, through the Curwensville column, to return their sincere thanks to neighbors and friends, for their kindness and help during the illness and funeral of the wife and mother. The family will also remember with gratitude the different organizations, for their kindness and floral tributes.

In conversation with a Curwensville citizen last Saturday, who is very much interested in the Industrial and Community Association movement recently inaugurated, he informed us that in the three manufacturing industries now being operated in this town, not one dollar of Curwensville money was invested, and that they could go at will and Curwensville people would have nothing to say about it. We had never taken this view of the industrial question before, yet we can readily see that this information was correct. Suppose, for argument's sake, that both of the large tanneries here should burn down or be otherwise destroyed, and the owners would say "We will not rebuild our plants in Curwensville, but will go elsewhere." The people could not say nay, because they have no money invested. There is lots of wealth in this town, and if new industries can be induced to locate here, Curwensville people should take stock enough therein so that they should have a voice in the matter as to whether the plant should go or stay.

The lecture delivered in the M. E. church last evening by Dr. O. E. Janney, of Baltimore, was not as largely attended as it should have been, owing to the fact that no admission was charged. The gentleman's discourse was of a high order and proved to be very instructive and interesting to those who were present. The weather turned out to be a hum.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopwood, who reside in Uniontown, Pa., are guests at the home of J. M. McKinley, and also in the home of Howard H. Hopwood.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

A very pleasant birthday surprise was given Port Harley, at his home on Fourth street last evening, when some twenty five of his friends dropped in on him to wish him well on his journey to the allotted three score and ten mark. Of course Port has a good while to go before reaching that far distant goal, but as he won't say just how far, we won't tell you, either. The evening was spent in playing progressive euchre, Mrs. Frank Connelly and J. L. Shillen carrying off the prizes. Most delicious refreshments were also one of the pleasant features of the evening.

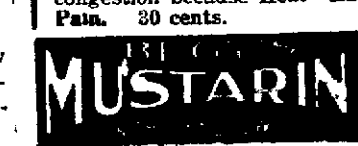

A fine, big baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Young, at their home on Weaver street, Sunday morning last.

Guard Against Jack Frost
with "Exide" Starting & Lighting Service

JACK FROST is a real enemy of the Starting and Lighting Battery. Prepare your battery to resist his attacks by making sure that it is in good condition for its winter's work.

Remember, that your car is much harder to start in winter than in summer, and also that the long winter nights call for greater use of lights.

Drive around to our "Exide" Service Station and let us inspect your battery. We make no charge for this service. Expert attention at this time will assure you good service this winter and save you money.

If you do not run your car this winter—send your battery to us and let us care for it during the cold weather. We will give it proper care and return it to you in the spring in good condition. Our small charge for this service may save you the cost of a new battery in the spring.

The MAN NOBODY KNEW

By Holworthy Hall

"His own copy of it was lost, but I shall I translate."

"Pierre Dumas, private of the sixtieth Territorial, during the battles of the fourth of May and the days following, has made exhibit of the highest devotion and the greatest courage; and especially by carrying out a volunteer duty, under heavy fire, on the night of the sixth of May, has given to his whole detachment an extraordinary example of loyalty and heroic sacrifice."

He gave the newspaper to Mr. Cullen. "And here—is his Croix de Guerre." On impulse, he handed it not to Mr. Cullen, whose palm was ready for it, but to Angela.

"And here is his Croix de Guerre." On impulse, he handed it not to Mr. Cullen, whose palm was ready for it, but to Angela.

She had taken the decoration half fearfully, half she had clanked at Hilliard with an expression so curiously combined of awe and for and jealousy that his own eyes wavered, and he had momentarily averted his gaze. When he had ventured to turn to her again, she had carried one hand to her breast, pressed tightly, she was looking down at the brocade cross in her lap, and her shoulders were shaking perceptibly. Hilliard gripped the arms of his chair, and every muscle of him was drawn taut. . . .

"It would seem to me," said Mr. Cullen, somewhat thickly, "that he wiped the slate clean enough for all practical purposes, anyway." He took the wax cross from Angela's reverent fingers, and examined it curiously. He looked at Angela, and slipped his arm around her; she sat up straighter, and drew a shivering breath. "I may have been wrong in my judgment," said Mr. Cullen soberly.

Hilliard, who had been moodily sunk in reverie, fumbled a third time in his inner coat pocket.

"He sent you a letter," he said, "I suppose you've been wondering, under all the circumstances, what brought me up here to you. It wasn't to apologize particularly; it was to bring you his message. And perhaps I'd better say now that he made me read it."

With Angela peering over his shoulder, Mr. Cullen strained to decipher the uneven penmanship. He began to read aloud:

"Dear Mr. Cullen: 'I am asking Mr. Henry Hilliard to bring you this letter personally. I want him to tell you what I'm not writing, too. And you can tell other people, if you care to.'

"I want you to know that since I've had time to think, I've changed my mind about a good many things. I've come to the conclusion that you were right and I was wrong. Maybe you won't remember the last talk we had together, but I do. You told me then that I didn't have it in me to make good unless I learned that I was about the most worthless young man in town, and the one with the hardest row to hoe in order to make something out of myself, and set out from there. Well, I've learned it. I had to. Of course, I couldn't agree with you at the time. That wouldn't have been expected. But over here I've had one lesson after another. Some of them were pretty bitter, but they've all helped. And since May, when I was hurt, I've had lots of time to think them over.

"I never deserved your kindness and now I can't even express my thanks. Please you to know that this war has taught me what you tried to, and couldn't—that I was as close to zero value at home as a man could be. It's only through this war that I've got any pride in myself, and I'm sort of like Kipling's gentleman ranker—I'm proud of myself because I've done away with all the other kinds of pride I used to have. And I believe I've made good—not as a great general, but as a private soldier. That was the trouble at home—I was only fit to be a private, and I thought I could be a general off hand. You said I'd do well if I learned that, and I have. They gave me the Croix de Guerre, and in a way, that proves it, doesn't it? Notice that they didn't even make me a corporal, though! That's all right—I haven't had enough training yet to be a corporal! It's curious that I'll admit that, isn't it?"

"I want you to know that I've thought of you a great deal. I don't blame you for letting me go. I did once, but I don't now. Please, think of me, though, as a man who came through at the finish, even if he'd been pretty hopeless before.

"Hilliard, the best man in the world, has promised to bring you this letter. I hope you'll be glad to see him, and to hear his side of the story. This is my apology and my blessing. If that's worth anything to you, I send a kiss to Angela.

"R. M."

Mr. Cullen ended with a falling inflection, and let the hand which held the letter drop to his knee.

"The letter, as you might guess from the looks of it," said Hilliard, "was written at several different times—according to his strength. I want you to realize, too, Mr. Cullen, that it was no small effort for him to write it. And then I was in Switzerland when he died, and his possessions had all gone to one of those tape-bound bureaux, so that I had a fearful time to identify myself and get what he had meant me to have, and after that, I had to make a sudden trip to Russia, and back to England again. There were delays—delays. I was ill for several months myself; I had typhoid in London. I should have mailed these things to you long ago, but he had begged me to come in person, and I had promised. And every day I expected that in another week or two I should start for home. I feel that I owe you this explanation, and a great plea for forgiveness for what must seem to you like gross indifference on my part. But I landed hardly two weeks ago, and I came up to you at the earliest possible moment."

"In some ways, he was a most remarkable young man," said Mr. Cullen, irrelevantly. "Nobody ever understood why he turned out such a black sheep. Came from a fine old family. I suppose his father was one of the most loved men in Onondaga county. Dick lived for years on his father's reputation, after people stopped noticing him on his own account. Just took advantage of the fact that nobody could quite hear to be harsh to his father's son. But he was always a wild young chap, nothing very bad, except that just too much of anything—including liquor—was just enough for him! Had too quick a temper to be diplomatic enough to hold a job, and didn't care much about working hard, and finally the tide turned, and he began to get treated just as if his father hadn't been a sort of popular idol, and then his disposition soured, and he made some bad mistakes. I gave him the last job he ever had in Syracuse, and had to let him go. . . . and I told him some plain facts when I did. That's what he refers to."

"I assumed," said Hilliard, hesitatingly, "that at one time he had been what you might call . . . disappointed in love? Something was weighing on him—he practically admitted it, but that was one point that he didn't appear to want to confess, even to me."

"He was engaged to Carol Durant," Angela had taken the cross again, and held it like a precious relic. "She broke it off, just before he went away."

"The day before," added Mr. Cullen. "That was one of the two reasons why he went."

"I see. . . . On account of his habits?"

"That was the gossip," said Mr. Cullen heavily. "Doctor Durant was supposed to have—"

"Didn't he write to her?" asked Angela, raising her eyes.

"Not that I . . . He stopped quickly. 'I trust you'll forgive me, but I'd imagined from various remarks he made at different times, that he was really . . . that he was greatly attached to you.' This last was addressed to Angela, who was both dignified and shaken by the suggestion. Her father, however, nodded in the negative.

"Angela wasn't much more than fifteen, sir. They were great friends; he was very fond of her. No, it was Carol Durant he was engaged to. Didn't he ask you to see her?"

"No."

"But you will, I hope, won't you?" "You can see Carol here tonight, if you care to," said Angela, uncertainly. "She and . . . and a friend of hers are coming over to talk about another Red Cross drive. Carol's on the committee. They ought to be here any minute now."

"Yes," said Hilliard. "If I'm going to see her, I think I should rather—see her here."

Mr. Cullen signed sternly. "Well, perhaps it's better, and I shall want to telephone this to the Herald if you don't object. It's the least we can do, all things considered."

"How long are you staying in town, Mr. Hilliard?"

"He made no plans whatsoever," he said, after a slight pause. "I sold my interests to a British syndicate of bankers two months ago. My home is where my baggage is. I'm thinking of taking a day or two to see certain of Dick's friends—the ones he talked about most—and after that, the future is on the knees of the gods."

Mr. Cullen regarded him with sincere respect.

"It would give me great pleasure," he said, a trifle pompously, "if you would be my guest for the time you're here, Mr. Hilliard. It would please me very much indeed." Hilliard's heart pounded.

"And me too," said Angela, gently. Hilliard's heart threatened to suffocate him; not entirely because the game was going so infinitely better than he had dared to hope, but also because it was Angela who entreated him.

"It's wonderfully good of you," he protested, "but I couldn't disturb you to that extent. Thank you, but—"

Mr. Cullen stopped him by an inclusive gesture.

"You won't disturb us in the slightest! I wish you'd come with us, Mr. Hilliard. I should feel much better than having you stay downtown."

"Well—" said Hilliard, dubiously. His soul was filled with unholy joy, but his outward demeanor was deprecatory. "It's ever so kind of you; still—"

"As a favor to me," urged Mr. Cullen.

"As a favor to me," echoed Angela, and Hilliard looked attentively at her, and was obviously swayed. She noticed it; he had intended her to notice it. He gave her a smile which had the power, even in her somber mood, to draw a faint response in kind.

"If you're sure it won't be a hardship to you—"

"Nonsense! It's settled, then, is it? I'll send one of my cars down for your things."

Hilliard's eyes flickered at the ingenuous vanity; he had recently learned that Mr. Cullen had made more money during the past twelve months than during the previous twelve years.

"Well," he said, "if you're so charitable as to insist—"

"I do, sir, I do! You're at the Onondaga, of course?"

Angela, who had been listening intently, started up at the unmistakable echo of footfalls on the walk.

"Here comes Carol!" she gasped. "And . . . and Jack! Oh, Mr. Hilliard! Oh, dad! Who's going to tell her?"

As Mr. Cullen flinched, Hilliard put out his hand in a motion of supreme restraint. "Whatever Dick Morgan may have been at home," he said, "I knew him after he offered his life for a great ideal, and I'm proud that he was turned to face the girl he had tried to die for."

called me his friend. I'll tell Mrs. Durant myself, please. It's my right."

And turned to face the girl he had tried to die for, and failed.

Says Vinol, our Cod Liver and Iron Tonic, made her eat better, sleep better and feel better.

Mrs. Greenwald's Letter
"Canada, E. - I was run-down, could not eat or sleep, and my lungs were a good deal so I could hardly do my housework. Vinol built me up, and I feel better, sleep better and feel better in every way. Vinol is certainly good for a run-down system." - Mrs. S. E. GREENWALD.

Such letters prove how nervous, anemic, run-down, overworked men, women and children increase their appetite, strength and endurance by taking Vinol. That is because it contains cod liver oil, iron and manganese peptonates - the greatest tonic known.

Women Need Swamp-Root

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you first wish to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention The Clearfield Progress.

OBITUARY

HOWARD CATHCART

Howard, youngest son of W. W. and Nora Cathcart, died in Akron, Ohio on February 12, 1920, of peritonitis following the influenza.

Deceased had gone to Akron just two weeks before his death and had taken sick immediately.

His brother Ralph was summoned to his bedside at once, and was with him until he passed away.

The body was brought to his home near Olanta on Friday night and interment was made in the Mount Zion cemetery, on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Howard was a promising young man always greeting every one with a pleasant word and smile, and will be greatly missed by his friends, and in his home, being the first one to be taken out of the home circle.

The eastern in which he was held was shown by the many beautiful floral offerings.

He was a member of the Young Peoples Bible Class who attended the service in a body, and also belonged to the P. O. of A. and P. O. S. of A., the latter having charge of the funeral.

W. C. T. U. SOCIAL

There was a large assemblage at the W. C. T. U. Social held in the Trinity M. E. church, for the entertainment of the members and friends, who were trying to add more to their apportionment of the million dollar fund. The amount realized was $70.

The musical part of the program was much enjoyed also an amusing recitation by Mrs. Bouton. The program opened with violin solos by Miss Emily Edmiston, with Miss Alice Smith at the piano. Mrs. Rosenthal sang beautifully, also a duet by Mrs. McKelvey and Mrs. Carrie Smith, was much enjoyed. Miss Grace Underwood also favored with a solo.

The President and Vice President gave short talks. Mrs. McCord also leading in prayer.

Light refreshments were then served in the church parlor, a social time enjoyed and all departed to their homes, well pleased with their entertainment.

LOCAL BOY AWARDED SCHOLARSHIP

Our buyers who have been in New York for the past two weeks have just returned. They report that the styles they bought this season will be more attractive than ever before. A few of the new coats and suits have already arrived and will be on display this week. Come in and view the early advance styles.

Women's New Spring Suits That Revel in Smartness

These groups of new models embody every tasteful fashion touch that the season has approved.

Never were suits smarter, never did they show more becoming lines, never did they present better values than in this advance showing of distinctive models. The materials are tricotine jersey, tweeds, gaberdine, poriet twill and serges. The leading color is navy blue.

Clever New Coats - Just In!

This first showing includes coats of jersey, polo cloth, tweeds, goldens and gaberdine in styles appropriate for general street, afternoon wear, travel and the cat - straight line effects and military styles in all the wanted shades.

A. W. LEONARDSON COMPANY

ON THE SCREEN

Bert Lytell who plays the male modiste in the de luxe screen classic, Inc., production of the Hatttons' comedy, "Lombardi, Ltd.," took a course in dressmaking. That sounds rather strange, but it is the truth.

Most any time during the production of the picture you could catch Bert emerging from or entering one of the Los Angeles ladies' tailoring establishments with a bundle of patterns and pieces of flimsy material under his arm.

And stranger even, they tell us that he progressed, too. So well that when he started work in the draping scenes of "Lombardi, Ltd.," another stilette creation was added to the silent drama.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Edgar A. Swann and Annie Zerby, both of Punxsutawney.

Earl A. Saxe, of Blandburg, Pa., and Ruby Meckley, of Pike township.

William F. Schmoke, of Clearfield, and Rose A. Lippart, of Boggs township.

Joseph Lukach, of Gearhartville, and Annie Safek, of Hawk Run.

Edward Foote, of Blairsville, N. Y. and Dorothy McNally, of DuBois.

Samuel B. Wilkins, of Union, N. Y., and Dorothy May Kunseiman, of DuBois.

PAIN, PAIN, PAIN STOP NEURALGIA

Rub nerve torture, pain and all misery right out with "St. Jacobs Liniment"

You are to be pitied—but remember that neuralgia torture and pain is the easiest thing in the world to stop. Please don't continue to suffer; it's so needless. Get from your druggist the small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Liniment"; pour a little in your hand and gently rub the "tender nerve" or sore spot, and instantly—yes, immediately—all pain, ache and soreness is gone. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain—it is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin. Nothing else gives relief so quickly. It never fails to stop neuralgia pain instantly, whether in the face, head or any part of the body. Don't suffer!

To Prevent Flu and Colds Three Rules You Should Observe

- (1) Sleep 8 hours—With windows wide open.
- (2) Eat wisely—exercise regularly—don't worry.
- (3) Avoid crowds and persons having colds.

Flu This Year is Milder

The rules given above, recommended by the New York City Board of Health, are guides to good health at all times. Particularly they are followed just now, when influenza is again abroad in the land. Authorities agree, however, that the flu this year is less severe than in the last epidemic—the attacks are shorter and the death rate lower. In fact, many physicians insist that the epidemic now being reported from so many sections are not flu at all, but simply the old-fashioned grip.

Keep the Air Passages Healthy While we know very little more about the flu now than we did last year—the germ itself has never been positively identified—still most authorities agree that the flu germs are breathed in. If the system is in good shape and the membranes or lining of the air passages is in healthy condition—these germs are thrown off.

A good plan is to melt a little Vick's VapoRub in a spoon, night and morning, and inhale the vapors, also apply a little up the nostrils several times a day, especially just before being exposed to crowds.

Treat All Colds Promptly Above all, keep free from colds, as colds irritate the lining of the air passages and make them real breeding grounds for germs. Prompt use of Vick's VapoRub aids in preventing colds. For head colds, sore throat or hoarseness, rub Vick's well over the throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. For deep chest colds, severe sore throat or bronchitis, hot wet towels should first be applied to the throat, chest and back between the shoulder blades, to open the pores. Then Vick's should be rubbed in over the entire chest and skin is red—spread on flannel and covered with two thicknesses of hot flannel cloths. Leave the steaming loaves around the neck of the vapors released by the heat may be freely inhaled.

These vapors, inhaled with open breath, carry the penetrating remedy to the lungs and air passages. At the same time Vick's is rubbed on the throat and chest, thus aiding to relieve the congestion within.

Use of External Treatments for Colds Increasingly Vick's VapoRub is the discovery of a North Carolina physician, who found how to combine in one the standard time-tested remedies—Camphor—Menthol—Eucalyptus—Thyme, etc.—as that which the salve is applied to the body, these ingredients are absorbed in the form of vapors.

Vick's is particularly recommended for children's colds, as since it is externally applied, therefore can be used safely and often without the slightest harmful effects.

The best evidence of the value of Vick's is the steadily increasing number of people who have converted to the use of this "old side" treatment.

Beginning with the outbreak of a small retail drug store, the use of Vick's has grown year by year—state by state—until now more than 17 million have used annually. And this is not the limit that Vick's is a new form of health and vitality.

Write to many folks in the South and West. Vick's can be had at all druggists in three sizes—25c, 50c or $1.25.

NOTICE

All women of the town and county are urged to become members of the Woman's Hospital Auxiliary. The meetings are held the first Wednesday of each month, at the Nurses' Home. The dues are $1.25 a year. Please send your name to Mrs. W. I. Swoope, and be present at the next meeting of the Auxiliary. F16-52c

KERRMOOR HAS FLU EPIDEMIC

Out of a population of 142 people in Kerrmoor 72 of them are down with the influenza.

PARENTS

You have watched the children's school reports closely. Has your child made the advance it should? Are you being fair with the child if you continue to send him to school handicapped with defective vision? Think it over.
